RAPIST POLICE OFFICER SACKED

JAILED: Adam Provan

Four months after being convicted, disciplinary action carried out by Charles Thomson

basildon@yellowad.co.uk

A POLICE officer who patrolled Barking, Havering and Redbridge has finally been sacked from the force – four months after he was convicted of rape.

PC Adam Provan, 39, was found guilty of two counts of rape at Wood Green Crown Court on November 29, but was only sacked by the Met Police on Wednesday, March 20.

He is serving a nine-year prison sentence for raping a 16-year-old girl in a woodland, then forcing her to commit another sex act in Central Park, Harold Hill.

Before his conviction, he had served with the East Area Command Unit but the rape occurred in 2010.

Provan shaved almost a decade off his age, telling his victim he was 22.

He met the girl through one of her friends.

His trial heard he had told the girl she knew she could trust him because he was a police officer.

He exchanged messages and photos with the girl before convincing her to go on a date.

They met up in late August 2010 on the premise that they would go on a date, but instead Provan took the girl to woodland where he raped her.

He then took her to a fast food restaurant in Harold Hill, ordered her to lie to her father and say they'd been to see a film, and used his phone to look up cinema listings so she could construct a convincing story.

Before taking her home he then took the girl to Central Park and attacked her again, forcing her to commit a sex act.

The girl eventually reported the attacks in 2016 and told police she had repeatedly said "no" to Provan, so he could not possibly have believed she was consenting.

He was charged in September 2017 and convicted in November 2018.

The Met said Provan had "abused his position" to commit a "brazen and calculated" assault.

Yet after his conviction and sentence, he remained employed by the Met for four months, only finally being sacked last week.

A Met Police spokesman said: "A police constable convicted of rape has been dismissed without notice from the Metropolitan Police Service.

"A special case hearing on Wednesday, March 20, found allegations that PC Adam Provan breached police standards of professional behaviour in respect of discreditable conduct proven as gross misconduct.

"PC Provan did not attend the special case hearing."

Emotional meeting in library fight

CAMPAIGNERS are continuing to try to protect a library as plans for a community hub on the site loom.

As part of Redbridge Council's local plan, the Gants Hill library site is earmarked to become a hub.

Council services, doctors surgeries and police stations will be centralised on one site in a bid to save money.

But many want Gants Hill library and its car park to remain.

More than 100 people including Labour and Conservative councillors and London Assembly member Keith Prince attended a two-hour public meeting last week.

Organiser and chairman Kartik Parekh said: "The residents not only shared their concerns but also poured out their emotions. I believe that it was important that the all members of the panel heard first hand the feelings of residents and were compelled to answer some very tough questions. "It is very different when councillors responsible for the proposals have to look the residents in the eye and respond."

Conservatives last month drew attention to 261 homes in the local plan for Barkingside ward, the area Gants Hill library sits in. They claim homes could be built on the site.

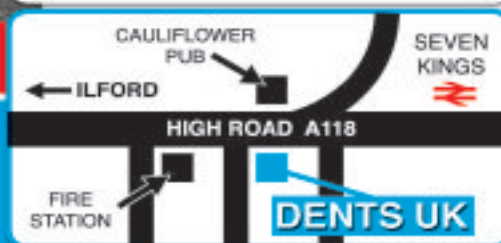

But council leader Cllr Jas Athwal dismissed the claims.

The council plans a consultation on the community hub plans for the Gants Hill library site in June where formal feedback can be given by members of the public.
